Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2012. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 279 x 216 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.The story is told from the point-of-view of a 45-year-old doctor, Esmerald Thorne, who is the bastion of the small-town medical community in which he resides. His patients love him and he loves his patients. But if you read between the lines you also get to see that he might have a bit of a god complex, because he is a man of science who thinks himself slightly superior to the mere mortals he treats. Of course, with hindsight, and knowing that the book has a strong religious message to impart, it's clear that Stuart Phelps wants to cut her doctor character down a peg or two. She gives him a more human side by having him fall desperately in love with Helen, a woman 12 years his junior. ( My accident held me a prisoner for six weeks. But my love put me in chains in six minutes. ) And after a short courtship the pair marry and later become parents to a son. Dr Thorne describes himself as being chloroformed with joy. Then the cracks in their marriage begin to appear. Dr Thorne is an irritable man and he begins to find Helen irritating. He cannot understand why she frets so much about their poorly son. He dismisses the baby's constant crying as nothing more than teething problems. And then one day, after a tiff with his wife, he storms out and is involved in a fatal horse and carriage accident. I had been dead twelve hours before I found out. The rest of the book revolves around Dr Thorne coming to terms with his new life in the afterlife. He...
