Excerpt: . of sugar-water. The people who gather such sugar-water, fill a kettle with it and let it boil till it is thick, and when it has become cold it is a thick honey. The sugar-trees usually stand in forests near the brooks, and they grow wild. The beautiful tulip-trees f grow frequently there. In the month of May, when they are in blossoms, they are full of tulips; these look yellow and tabbled red, and are as natural as This species of trees is described under the name of maple-trees in the History of the French Colonies of North America, p. 213. M. De Diereville calls them wild fig-trees. t These tulip-trees are known to the French in Louisiana under the name of tulipier as a sort of laurel-trees. See the above quoted book, p. 334. those those that grow out of the ground...
