Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: just to trust the method of differences here, but rather to consider the simple difference between averages. The average 63 for the normal period 2 is deducted from the average of 88 for the alcohol period 2, resulting in a difference of +25 (see section in). The differences between averages for the other periods are +15, +14, +20, and +48, with an average for all periods following the dose of +20. The probable correctness figures apply to these differences and are in every case of such size as to give them a good degree of reliability. The memory data, presented in whatever way we chose, shows that with this particular memory test and in the particular form used there is a better performance following the alcohol. This confirms the re 1 It should be noted that there were only 4 periods on June 29. suits obtained with Subject VI and with the other normal subjects in the former series. It does not, however, explain why the memory results after alcohol should be opposed to those found for most other processes. It is noteworthy that on the last day, July 4, the subject obtained a conspicuously higher score than on any other day. His best work in this test came in periods 4 and 5 of the day,1 i. e., towards the last of the session. These same features were striking in the results of the word-reaction test, which employed almost the identical apparatus used for the...
