The commanding officer has also the gratification of informing the battalion that Col. Thomas, C.H., the inspecting officer, expressed his approval not only of the manner in which they passed the inspection, but of the smartness with which they executed their movements in brigade with the regular troops. The commanding officer takes this opportunity of reminding the battalion that they have gained this credit by their attendance at the week s encampment, and for any sacrifices they have made in so doing he is sure that every man will be compensated by the self-respect he must feel at having honestly discharged the duty which he undertook when he enrolled himself as a volunteer. The commanding officer begs to thank his brother officers for the cordial assistance they have rendered him throughout. His thanks are also due to Capt. Nicol,...
